BIBLICAL EXPRESSIONS OF LOVE

Love is slow to lose patience: It is resolved to wait without becoming angry when others fall below the expectations that it has set for them.

Love is kind and constructive: It is cautious not to make quick judgments, and honestly seeks to be a healing presence in its relationships.

Love is not possessive: It does not have to be in control of every conversation or situation.

Love is not anxious to impress: It is secure with who it is, and does not always have to be "the life of the party."

Love is not arrogant and egocentric: It does not have an inflated view of its own importance, but is concerned about the well being of others.

Love has good manners: It respects the rights and dignity of others without forcing its crude and thoughtless behavior on them.

Love is not selfish: It is not always concerned with the rights of "Me, Myself, and I," but finds pleasure in others' happiness and success.

Love is not touchy and resentful: It is understanding when mistreated, and forgiving in the long-term.

Love finds no delight in the sins of others: It does not rejoice in the flaws of others in order to rest easy with itself.

Love rejoices when right wins and truth prevails: It excites in the correction of injustices, and is angry enough to pay the price of involvement when someone's rights are violated.

Love has staying power under pressure: It perseveres even when the easier route is to abandon someone once committed to.

Love extends the benefit of a doubt: It discounts the validity of rumors and gossip with a belief in the best about people until the facts prove otherwise.

Love sees with the eyes of hope: It is captivated with the potential in people, realizing that they have not yet become what they can be.

Love refuses to quit: When it is tempted to throw in the towel on a person or cause, it prays for a second wind to hang tough until the very end.
